Dear Archie,

I would like to tell you about a recent trip my family and I took to Bombay. We left on the Indian Airlines afternoon plane at Chakeri Airport here in Kanpur. We left Kanpur at three-thirty and landed in Lucknow at about four o'clock. We waited there for twenty-five minutes and then we reboarded. We landed at Pallam Airport in Delhi at seven o'clock and then we had to wait until eight-thirty. We then boarded a Caravelle jet for Bombay and reached Bombay at ten-thirty. We checked in at the Taj Mahal Hotel, the best in India, and got a room on the sixth floor. It was the new wing and we got one of the best suites in the hotel. We even had a private balcony where we ate most of our dinners. We were there for three days. I'll tell you Archie, it was fabulous!

One of the nicest experiences was when we took a boat trip to Elephanta Island to see some caves called Elephanta Caves. Our guide's name was Sara and she was very nice. The trip to Elephanta Caves took an hour to get there and an hour to come home. When we got there we walked across a long dock and Sara gave us our choice of walking up—would you believe 122 steps—or a chair carried by men on their shoulders. I did not want to seem weak in front of all the other people so I walked up just like everybody else, though I'm sorry to say the strain was very great on my mother, for that day she wasn't feeling well. We finally made it up to the top and went in the caves which I'll tell you, Archie, was very interesting. Most of the panels were damaged severely in some places.

We then went back and had some lunch. After a short lunch my dad took my brother Tyrell and me to Thieves Market, which was very unusual. My brother and I each bought 10 or 20 rare coins and then we left because I wasn't feeling well.

The day before we left my whole family had gone in a horse-drawn carriage, the kind which was used in the olden days and is still used in Quebec and England. All in all Archie, it was an interesting trip and I'd love to do it again.

Dear Archie,

My name is Jennifer. I think I'm going to have an exciting summer! We're having a girl from Hong Kong sent to our house for the summer, just to see how we live here in America. She is coming through a travel agency.

I'm looking forward to having her, and since I live in Boston I can show her Paul Revere's house and everything. I'm going to show her all the places I know in Boston. I'm so excited! She doesn't speak English very well but I'm sure everything will work out just fine. I bet you one thing. If she knew how to speak English really well she would sure enjoy your TV show and your magazines. I'll show them to her anyway and I'll let you know what she says. Her name is Debbie Lai but you should see her name in Chinese.

Oh my goodness, I just can't wait! I better go now, but I'll keep in touch.

Dear Archie,

I would like to tell you about the chimpanzee my twin sister, Jackie, and I own. Just the other day we measured him and found he was exactly one foot, ten inches. The larger the size the larger the nuisance!

I'll begin by telling you about the first night we got him. Our mother gave us permission to let him sleep on the end of our bed. For the first four hours he was quiet, but then the eager feeling to play overcame him and he pounced on my sister's head. She awoke with a scream, waking me up. We settled him down and continued to sleep. When we awoke in the morning we found our chimpanzee in the washroom completely covered with toothpaste. Anyway, we cleaned him up and went down to breakfast. Our mother and father were still upstairs when Jackie and I sat down. The maid had already set the food on the table. Well, we started to eat, but was our father in for a big surprise. Our chimpanzee had his hands in our father's breakfast. At first he crammed some into his mouth, then he glanced up at us, who had already burst out laughing. He grinned innocently, wiped the food from his mouth and set the rest down.

The rest of the day turned out pretty well but our chimpanzee played too many mischievous tricks to tell you about.

I sincerely hope you have enjoyed my letter.
